

PI SUNYER HOUSE

PROJECT: PI SUNYER HOUSE

LOCATION: CADAQUÉS . GIRONA . SPAIN

YEAR: 1999

Located in the hills around the Cadaqués Bay, this house is integrated and disappears in the landscape because of the slate stone, protagonist material of this project. The chromatic combination with gray, brown, red and orange notes bring in warmth to the volumes and gives personality to this house, whose sloping roofs create an outstanding game.

The lineal proposition of the house fits with the shape of land, rectangular and with panoramic views to the bay.

From the steeply sloping road, two entrances, one for cars and another for pedestrian are established. Through this garden space bounded by stone walls, you reach the main entrance of the house, located in the middle of the ground floor which is divided from it into two functional areas.

The atmosphere inside the house is sober and warm and, some of the furniture are built in, the kitchen, the bathrooms and the library of the living room.

A courtyard, partially covered by a pergola, is the link between the main house and the guests' area and the shade area. Facing this, there is a large infinity pool. The native vegetation is incorporated alternately in several parts of the land.
